

; So I Walked

In ; So I Walked, Karim Taylor focuses on to a time in life when she began to pay attentions to certain aspects of change. From 2010 to 2020, Taylor led a life of several traumatic experiences. From these traumatic moments, Taylor began to change her lifestyle to one of walking away as a way of attempting to speak to God, a way of remaining strong, a way to make it through to the next phase in her life. She describes in heartbreaking detail two attacks in particular of sexual spousal abuse and a forty-five-mile-per-hour jump from a moving vehicle and how she triumphed past these trials to maintain her identity and strengthening her faith in God. As God has made apparent, Karim Taylor is one of His greatest miracles.

About the Author

Karim Taylor was a runaway teen in Oceanside, California, and became a parent at eighteen. Taylor and her daughter then moved to Van Cleave, Mississippi. She married a North Carolinian guy and they had two children together. She returned to school and completed a nursing assistant certification course and gained full-time employment with the The Gardens of Ocean Springs. After Hurricane Katrina, she and her family lost everything. They relocated to North Carolina and she restarted her education journey to complete her bachelor's in behavioral health sciences.
